The Connecticut Transportation Institute's Technology Transfer Center, established at the University of Connecticut's School of Engineering in 1983, provides training, technical assistance, and informational materials to Connecticut's local governments on the planning, design, construction, maintenance, operation, and management of roads, bridges, and public transit. The Technology Transfer Center is a cooperative effort of the Connecticut Department of Transportation, the Federal Highway Administration's Local Technical Assistance Program (LTAP) and the University of Connecticut. For information on our services, call 860-486-5400 or visit us online at www.cti.uconn.edu.

The University of Connecticut is an affirmative action, equal opportunity institution. No state-appropriated funds were used to print this material.

Older Driver Highway Design

A Connecticut Road Scholar Program Elective Workshop

Wednesday, August 1, 2007

Hartford, CT

Learning Objectives

In this workshop participants will learn:

- ◆ Current demographics relating to older drivers and the significance of this major change and how it impacts our current understanding of the "design driver."
- ◆ Age-related physical, visual & cognitive capabilities that tend to diminish as we age.
- ◆ Handbook organization and content and how to use the handbook recommendations for intersections, interchanges, alignment and passing zones, work zones and rail grade crossings.
- ◆ Use of Handbook in the development of real-world solutions through an implementation example and exercise where participants will develop recommendations for the proposed redevelopment of a former elementary school site to be a community senior center.

Who should attend?

This workshop targets design, safety and traffic engineering personnel responsible for day to day design decisions.

Instructor

Our instructor is Gene Amparano, a Safety Engineer with the FHWA Resource Center's Safety and Design Technical Services Team.
